오빠 BBQ

Quality of food is very important to us.

At O.BBa, we aim to serve our dishes as freshly prepared as possible, hence the chefs only cook them when they receive the orders. Due to this, serving time might vary depending on the crowd.

Thank you!

저희 오빠자장&오빠BBQ는
최상의 재료로 최고의 음식을 제공해 드리고자 주문과 동시에
조리하므로 다소 시간이 걸릴 수 있습니다
양해 바랍니다.

KOREAN CHINESE RESTAURANT

오빠 짜장

중화요리

Korean Chinese cuisine

Korean Chinese cuisine is derived from traditional Chinese cuisine but has it been influenced by local ingredients in Korea. Due to geographical proximity, most Korean-Chinese dishes are derived from Northern styles of Chinese cuisine such as Beijing and Shandong cuisine. The cuisine developed in the port city of Incheon, where the majority of Korea's ethnic Chinese population historically lived. However, Chinese restaurants in Korea are unusual in that they are owned and run by Koreans, rather than ethnic Chinese. The latter development came in part due to the assimilation of the ethnic Chinese in Korea into the Korean culture as well as due to their outward migration due to legal discrimination they were subject to, especially under the Park Chung-hee administration. Consequently, the most authentic Korean Chinese cuisine can be found in centres of overseas Korean communities in the East Coast of the United States such as Queens and Manhattan in New York City; Palisades Park, Fort Lee, New Jersey and Koreatown, Los Angeles.

In South Korea there is an aspect of this cuisine which is unusual, in that home delivery is the main means through which it is put in front of diners. As such Korean Chinese cuisine is analogous to pizza delivery in the US or Indian take-away in the UK and every South Korean urban household is served by no fewer than two such establishments. The cuisine also occupies the same economic position to the two a-fore mentioned analogues, in terms of relative pricing vis-a-vis other dining options. Expensive gourmet Chinese cuisine at upscale establishments dedicated to such is also popular in South Korea, but the cuisine served is mainland Chinese styles.
